PORTRAITS FROM OUTSIDE-THREE SELF-TAUGHT ARTISTS, PLUS DAVID FINN, AT NORTH HALL GALLERY THROUGH DECEMBER 21

Portraits from the Outside,one of the new shows opening at the North Hall Gallery today, features three self-taught artists: Mr. Imagination, Mose Tolliver and Lee Godie.

Mr. Imagination, a Chicago sandstone and mixed media sculptor, believes he has lived a succession of past lives from an Egyptian Pharoah to an Indian Chief. With the aid of a nail and a sawblade he carves strange and exotic looking heads- some of which are self-portraits of his past lives. He also creates fabulous birds and beasts.

Mose Tolliver is a prolific painter from Alabama whose subjects range from a variety of animals and imagined creatures to demonic figures. His paintings can be exuberant or terrifying, and they display an unusual palette that is alternately bright or brooding.

Lee Godie is a Chicago painter and flamboyant street person. She paints idealized portraits of people-typically glamorous women, using great detail. She also paints animals, insects, leaves and flowers. Her portraits are rendered simply in a flat, frontal fashion.Godie works with water colors and a ball point pen on roll ends of commercially primed burlap or window shades cut in irregular proportions.

Also on exhibit is the work of David Finn, sculptor and Mass Art alumnus. He creates urban environmental installations, traditionally in street settings from empty lots to condemned buildings. He constructs life-sized figures that are built in layers, on an armature, with salvaged materials from milk containers to rags, beer cans and smashed radios; which he crushes and binds into a new "skin".
